A NOTE FROM JOHANNA...

As summer approaches and we see ourselves returning to a somewhat normal lifestyle, I look back and appreciate where the journey of the past couple of years has led us.

We've spent more time in our homes, allowing us to contemplate our surroundings. We've learned that family and home matter, that self-care is important, and that work can happen from anywhere.

I've seen Clients fall in love with their homes again, seeking sanctuary in comfortable spaces among loved ones.

I've always believed in functional and beautiful home designs that reflect how we want to live, and these past years have reminded us how important that is. I appreciate being a part of making your home a special place to seek refuge, entertain and create memories with friends and family.

Before & After KITCHEN TRANSFORMATION

THE FORGOTTEN DETAILS

We place a great deal of importance on specific details, sometimes forgotten details, that can really impact the final look and function of a space. Each newsletter, we'll feature a detail often overlooked by some, but never by Johanna and her team. Check out this issue's topic...

WHERE TO HANG YOUR TOWELS

With detailed and full remodels there are so many things to think about – what's the layout of the bath, what floor tile to select, where will the towels hang. After making all the major decisions, you think there is nothing left...but small things like bath accessories can sometimes be left behind. Towel bars, hand towels and hooks may seem like little things, but they can add that final, finish detail to the design.

Small towel bars at the sink are great for hand towels – you can hang more than one, make it decorative, and the towel dries more quickly.

Bath hooks have a great use besides just robes. They are perfect for hanging several bath towels, lots of kids' towels, or even pool towels. Hooks are even handy on a powder room door for handbags!

For bath towels? A combination of hooks, bars and double bars is the most convenient hanging method. Well-situated hooks near the shower and/or bath make it easier to reach towels. Towel bars come heated now too!

TIRIED OF YOUR OLD FURNITURE?

Think about Transforming It!

How do we know when it makes sense to revitalize old furniture to meet a new vision, or when to purchase new?
